STORIES FROM THE FARM AND RANCH!

Emil Redmon's Cow

Bank of the Flint Hills had the privilege of sponsoring a heartfelt project focused on preserving the stories of older farm and ranch folks—people who've witnessed incredible changes in agriculture, from the introduction of mechanization and GPS to advancements in genetics and herbicides.

Mark Feiden, a designer, writer, and photographer from Kansas, felt inspired to take action after losing a beloved cousin, a gifted storyteller. This project stems from his regret at not recording the tales of his great-grandparents and other family member before it was too late. Mark's mission is to capture the humor, wisdom, and essence of a bygone era, reminding us how precious it would be to hear the voices of our ancestors today.

The name of the project is Emil Redmon's Cow and the website is www.redmonscow.org
